

Swedish climate activist Greta Thunberg joined campaigners young and old on Friday for a climate change rally as COP26 continued in Glasgow, calling the summit a "failure and PR event."

Thunberg blamed world leaders for "creating loopholes and shaping frameworks" she said benefit themselves and called for "immediate" and "drastic" emission cuts to minimize the climate crisis.

She also took to the streets earlier on Friday to march with thousands of climate activists who say they have been underwhelmed by the commitments made by leaders, many of which are voluntary or have set deadlines that are decades away.
