

Hallow'een is a time for people to dress up in costumes, decorate their homes, and participate in activities such as trick-or-treating, because it's Halloween, where kids go door-to-door to collect candy and other treats! Halloween is associated with symbols such as jack-o'-lanterns, bats, and black cats, which are often used to decorate homes and party spaces, and many people also attend Halloween parties, where they may play games, tell stories, and enjoy food and drinks.

Remembrance Day has a history that can be followed back to what was originally Armistice Day. A key part of the celebration is the fact that the formal end of World War I was scheduled to take place at the 11th hour on the 11th day of the 11th month of the year in 1918. So, the following year, this date was celebrated in honour of those who fought in the war, especially those who lost their lives, and reminding everyone about the brutality and hostility of war.

Beloved in the United States, Thanksgiving is a holiday celebrated typically on the fourth Thursday of November. It's a time to reflect on the year, be thankful, and celebrate with friends and family by enjoying a delicious meal together. The origins of Thanksgiving can be traced back to the 1620s, when a group of English settlers, known as the Pilgrims, arrived in what is now Massachusetts. After a harsh winter, the Pilgrims were able to harvest a bountiful crop thanks to the help of the Wampanoag Native Americans. In gratitude, the Pilgrims held a feast to give thanks for their survival and the abundance of food.

The origins of Christmas Day can be traced back to ancient times, when many cultures all over the world celebrated various winter festivals and religious holidays. In particular, the ancient Romans celebrated Saturnalia, a winter festival that honoured the agricultural god Saturn and included gift-giving, feasting, and other revelries. The celebration of Christmas as we know it today, however, has its roots in the Christian tradition. .../... In the modern world, Christmas is celebrated by people of many different faith traditions and is widely recognized as a time of joy, celebration, and goodwill towards others.

First, think.
Second, dream.
Third, believe.
And finally, dare.
-Walt Disney
